“As travel planning has shifted from something you do ahead of time to something that's possible anytime, the TripAdvisor mobile app has become the essential companion for millions of travellers,” said Stephen Kaufer, president and CEO of TripAdvisor. “Reaching the milestone of 100 million downloads is evidence that travellers worldwide are benefitting from the TripAdvisor community's reviews and opinions, wherever their travels may take them.”

The TripAdvisor mobile app is recognised in the industry for its function and innovation. - Helpful features: Travellers on their trips can use the Near Me Now and Point Me There features to find nearby places of interest, read traveller reviews and see dynamic maps of their location.
- Available offline: Travellers may use City Guides anywhere with no data connection required to go on self-guided walking tours, and they may also use Trip Journal to add photos or comments to capture the highlights of their trip.
- Booking on-the-go: The TripAdvisor mobile app provides access to the site's Hotel Price Comparison (metasearch), enabling travellers to easily compare booking options at a glance with up-to-the-minute hotel prices and availability.

While TripAdvisor launched the first iPhone and Android mobile apps in mid-2010, and the first native smartphone apps in 2013, the company continues to make improvements. Three recently launched enhancements are:

- Type-ahead functionality for improved local results: This feature lets users quickly access more locally relevant search results based on their location.
- Google single sign on: Allows Android users to more quickly and easily login to their TripAdvisor accounts using their Google accounts, and it also lets users automatically download the app if they have created an account on desktop.
- See your saves on the map: This feature allows users to see places they have saved on the map with other points of interest, which helps travellers select the restaurants and attractions closest to their saved places.
